SCRIPT FOR SENIOR MANAGERS OF THE ROYAL DUTCH/SHELL GROUP OF COMPANIES

Please spend a moment to look at this legal notice.

Let me start by saying something about our third quarter results and some possible reserves reductions before turning to the major corporate proposals.

It has been a good quarter.

We delivered record net income ... of 5.4 billion dollars ... more than double the same period in 2003.

Earnings on a current cost of supplies basis were up 70 percent.

Cash generation continued strong ... with cash flow from operations up 20 percent.

LNG volumes increased by 6 percent. The fourth North West Shelf train in Australia started production during the quarter.

Capital investment for the quarter was 3.5 billion dollars. We expect the total for the year to be around 14 billion.

Over 80 percent of the nearly 10 billion dollars of investment so far this year has been in our upstream businesses.

We completed divestment of some of our refining interests in Japan and Malaysia, and the retail and commercial business in Peru during the quarter.

And in October we completed the sales of some products pipelines in the US and the fuels business in Portugal.

While shifting the portfolio to the upstream, we continue to generate significant cash and profits from the downstream.

This enables us to pay a highly competitive dividend ... amounting to some 7.5 billion dollars this year ... with another 1.7 billion dollars on share buybacks and option hedging.

The possible reserve reductions I mentioned are preliminary findings and still subject to challenge.

They are the result of the extensive programme of detailed reserve audits and assurance we now carry out in EP ... where there are new and comprehensive reserve guidelines and 3,000 professional staff have been retrained.

The potential 900 million boe reduction is the maximum for the some 55 percent of the reserves base so far audited. We will audit the rest as soon as possible.

The full impact will be communicated when the annual reserve process is completed in early 2005.

We are still reasonable confident of achieving an average 100 percent proved reserves replacement over the next five years.

Turning to structure, the proposal to establish Royal Dutch Shell as a unified global group is a major step in driving our business forward.

With the other changes we are making throughout the organisation ... such as Downstream-One, the new EP operating model and IT Vision ... it will provide the platform for delivering our strategy and regaining competitive leadership.

I will say what it means and then look forward to answering your questions.

However, given the nature of the proposed transaction and the applicable regulatory restrictions, what we can say is governed by strict rules.

Many of you are, of course, shareholders as well as employees and we cannot go beyond what is released to all shareholders through the stock exchange.

Royal Dutch Shell plc will benefit from having one smaller, single- tier board ... with 10 non-executive directors and 5 executive directors.

Aad Jacobs ... the present Chairman of the Supervisory Board of Royal Dutch ... will be the first non-executive Chairman. He will retire in 2006 and the search for a successor is already underway.

There will be one Group Chief Executive with full executive authority.

Jeroen van der Veer has been given this responsibility ... starting immediately.

The four Executive Directors ... of which I am one ... will report to him.

The new structure reflects best practice in corporate governance.

Royal Dutch Shell plc will be incorporated in the UK, where it should be a key constituent of the major London market.

The shares will be listed in London, Amsterdam and New York.

It will have its headquarters in the Netherlands, preserving the benefits of Dutch tax residency.

It will retain a substantial UK presence ... where Downstream and Trading businesses will continue to based, as will some corporate activities.

We expect to put these proposals to the AGMs in April and expect the corporate proposals will be implemented in May.

The allocation of shares will mean that Royal Dutch shareholders will be offered about 60 percent of the new company's ordinary shares and Shell Transport shareholders about 40 percent.

To seek to preserve national tax treatment of dividends there will be two types of share.

Royal Dutch shareholders will receive A shares with dividends from the Netherlands. Shell Transport shareholders will receive B shares with dividends from the UK ... to the extent available.

These shares will have the same rights in all other respects ... with one share/one vote.

What will these much clearer lines of authority mean for our ability to deliver our strategy and be more competitive?

As with the other organisational changes we are making, it is about four things ... clarity, simplicity, efficiency and accountability.

Let me look at each of these.

Clarity starts with a clear set of strategic priorities.

We have these

... in our strategy of 'more upstream and profitable downstream' presented last month

... in our commitment to raising the performance bar in everything we do,

... and in our drive to embed 'Enterprise First' thinking ... and a global view ... throughout the organisation.

It means moving from a consensus culture of prolonged discussion to one where decisions are taken ... and then followed by everybody.

It means having a common approach across Shell

... learning from best practice ... of which we have a lot ... rather than constantly reinventing solutions locally,

... standardizing our processes everywhere to reduce costs and improve effectiveness.

Clarity of organisation, approach and goals will provide a much stronger platform for achieving the competitive returns we need.

The new structure will be much simpler ... cutting out the complexity that has hampered our progress for too long.

The smaller, single Board ... with clearly defined roles for non-executives, the Chief Executive and the other Executive Directors ... will be more effective.

The move to a single headquarters is important. We will work together more effectively as an executive team.

All this is in line with what we are doing in the businesses ... focusing organisations to increase accountability, reduce duplication, focus resources, share learning, and standardise processes and delivery.

The new governance structure will be more efficient.

As Group Chief Executive, Jeroen will be able to focus on getting the best overall outcomes for the Group.

With CMD abolished, Executive Directors will be able to focus on delivering the business performance for which we are accountable.

Cutting out the duplication of board processes will save valuable time for this priority.

Discussion will still be rigorous. Checks, balances, questioning will be reinforced.

But the new structure will enable us to move faster to capture opportunities.

Finally, it's about greater accountability ... for all of us.

One Board will be accountable to one shareholder body.

As Group Chief Executive, Jeroen is accountable to the Board for implementing our strategy and delivering business performance.

As Executive Directors we are accountable to him for the performance of our businesses.

The CFO role has been enhanced ... among other things to oversee the strengthened framework of controls, risk assessment and reporting.

We will emphasise accountability throughout the organisation.

I believe this proposal is a major step forward for the Group.

It is a vital element in our drive to simplify the way we do business so that we can apply our strengths to deliver the performance we are capable of doing.

Jeroen mentioned that he was excited by the opportunities it opens. I share that excitement and believe you should too. We are on the move.

Now, within the legal constraints I mentioned at the beginning, let me hear what you have to say and try to answer your questions.

And finally, if you could look at this second notice while ... within the legal constraints I mentioned at the beginning ... I will try to answer your questions and look forward to hearing your views.
